Global e-learning project with UN, WHO and UNESCO

Reversals in SDG 4 progress caused by COVID-19 have heightened the urgency for scaled-up action and have increased the necessity to work across sectors, from health and nutrition to skills for work and climate action, to respond to the interconnected nature of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. Despite progress in ensuring opportunities for girls, women and minorities in STEMM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Mathematics, and Medical) fields, this segment of population, continues to be systematically underrepresented as users and leaders in STEMM. In order to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), we need to ensure full and equal access to, and participation in science for girls, women and minorities. Women's Health and Education Center (WHEC) aims to contribute to the Future of Education and Learning Skills: how and why students learn matters. Our world needs science and science needs girls, women and minorities.
