Medical Sections Writers Guide Obstetrics, Gynecology, Uro/gynecology & Focus on Mental Health

Welcome to WomensHealthSection.Com team! This medical section writer's guide is guideline for your information. This document is meant to steer you, but not to stifle your creativity or medical knowledge. All ideas will be considered, and are encouraged. We assume that you are the expert and that you know what needs to be stated and/ or mentioned in each medical condition.

WomensHeathSection.Com is basically an “Internet Class Rooms in Women's Health Care” of Mutual Benefit & Mutual Respect. It has 5 separate sections: Violence against Women, Obstetrics, Gynecology, Uro/gynecology, and National healthcare policies and women's health. This web-learning project provides a platform for the exchange of experiences, ideas, and opinions on any aspect of health development with special emphasis on the theory and practice of national strategies for attaining health for all. We wish to stimulate discussion and bring to light new approaches to old problems in health development.

Articles are subject to editorial revision (including, where necessary, condensation of the text and omission of tabular and illustrative material) and they should not contain political statements or unconfirmed assertions.

The target audience is: healthcare providers of all levels. The articles written in the form of – Overview, provides a comprehensive and easy to understand and follow the whole picture of the disease process. This form in our opinion is easy to read and remember, not only for the health care providers, but also to the community as well. People searching the information and the resources on health topics on the Internet, have above average intelligence and they want to read such types of health information, to know more about the disease process. Glossary can help them to understand Medical Terms.

Basic Outline:

1. Basic description of the condition, including incidence.
2. Anatomy (if applicable). All anatomical discussions should be kept to a bare minimum.
3. Causes & Risk factors
4. Signs & Symptoms
5. Diagnosis, (with oncology topics include staging information).
6. Treatment – including side effects, follow up etc.
7. Prevention
8. Controversies in the Management: Very important part of the article and should be written in brief and to the point. This generates the discussion and helps us get, the opinions of the faculties, from all over the world and creates - a good Forum.

Please also include, if applicable:

- Glossary
- Support Services & Resources (if available).

General Considerations:

1. When formatting the text, please use bold text for demarcations instead of italics, or other special formatting. Tables can be used in the text but are discouraged because they take a long time to download and build. In general, only use tables when words cannot explain something clearly.
2. If there are any obvious links in the text, include a message in parentheses. Each condition section should include a list of links within the text; the links can be to other pages in other condition sections or glossary terms.
3. We plan to keep our site as educational as possible. We do not want to fill up sections with treatment advertisements. All specific drug company information will end up in a pop up window. Please keep this in mind when writing the treatment sections. Write as much as you like concerning treatment options, but please resist pushing any one treatment or drug. Obviously, if there is only one company that makes a certain treatment, it is appropriate to discuss it.
4. We prefer an interesting, narrative style to a scientific or academic one.

As your content comes into our office, we will edit and possibly send the content to our medical editors. We will ask you to do a final check for medical accuracy. If you have any questions or concerns, please do not hesitate to contact us. Authors are responsible for the accuracy of data and the correctness of references. Any textual material, data, line drawing or tables taken from other publications must have the permission of the copyright-holder, and it is the author's responsibility to obtain such permission.

The Big Picture:

Imagine, sitting in your home or an office and teaching Obstetrics, Gynecology, Uro/gynecology and other aspects of women's healthcare to the whole world and learning from their perspectives too. All over USA, we all deal with and provide care to the multicultural society. By interacting with different cultures, we will be able to understand different customs and learn to respect - the diversity.

Thanks so much for your continued commitment to
